Grace Note Awards honor four area schools

Four North Texas educational institutions receiving national and international notice, training the next generation of young musicians, were honored February 19 with our third annual Grace Note Awards. These awards are presented each season by the New Philharmonic Orchestra of Irving to groups working to create a vibrant musical scene in this area.

Accepting the award for the Dallas Independent School District's arts magnet, the Booker T. Washington High School for the Performing and Visual Arts, was associate principal Dr. Jennifer Jackson and director of jazz studies Bart Marantz. The nationally ranked school was recognized for their continuing leadership academically and in jazz and other music studies, and for their students' and graduates' notable contributions to the arts.
